GLOBAL REAL ESTATE INDEX FUND (NGREX)

As of 03/31/18

FUND COMMENTARY

In the first quarter of 2018, the FTSE® EPRA®/NAREIT® Global Index returned -3.55% underperforming the broader global equity market, represented by MSCI World Index, which returned -1.28% in the first quarter.

The top-performing countries over this time period were Spain and China, returning 12.13% and 11.14%, respectively. India and Israel were the worst-performing countries for this quarter, with returns of -17.75% and -14.45%, respectively.

During the quarter, the Global Real Estate Index Fund returned -3.14%, in-line with the FTSE® EPRA®/NAREIT® Global Index returns of -3.55%. Global equity returns saw some weakness through the first quarter of 2018. U.S. equities in the first quarter of 2018 saw their first negative quarter since third quarter 2015. The S&P 500® Index started the quarter extremely strong extending the exuberance from Q4 2017 generated from the new tax reform. The excitement pushed the Index to new all-time highs in late January before volatility came back into the markets due to some surprising economic news followed by trade war speculation. Market participants decided it was time to take some gains off the table as there was a surprise in employment data for January which propelled interest rates higher, and heightened rhetoric from Washington on new trade tariffs threatening the current projections for global growth. The Federal Reserve did continue with their efforts to normalize rates with a 25 basis point (0.25%) hike in March bringing the target rate to 1.75%, hinting at two more hikes later in 2018, as well as a more aggressive path potentially for 2019. This confluence of events led to an increase in market skepticism and uncertainty around future growth, hindering equities on the whole. Developed ex-U.S. markets took an abrupt turn during the first quarter, posting their first negative quarter since Q4 2016 while also underperforming U.S. equities. Volatility in U.S. equity markets triggered increased volatility abroad. The geopolitical events, including the aggressive posturing of North Korea has calmed for the time being as trade has become the focal point for most nations. Oil remained range bound for the quarter in the low to mid $60s a barrel, ending the quarter at just under $65.
