MID CAP INDEX FUND (NOMIX)

As of 03/31/18

FUND COMMENTARY

In the first quarter of 2018, the S&P MidCap 400® Index returned -0.77%. Mid-cap equities underperformed large-cap equities, as measured by the S&P 500 Index, which returned -0.76% in the first quarter.

The top-performing sectors over this time period were health care and information technology, returning 6.11% and 4.04%, respectively. Energy and real estate were the worst-performing sectors for the quarter, with returns of -7.19% and -6.52%, respectively.

The Mid Cap Index Fund posted a total return of -0.78% for the quarter compared to the -0.77% return of the Fund's benchmark, the S&P Midcap 400 Index. U.S. equities in the first quarter of 2018 saw their first negative quarter since third quarter 2015. The S&P 500® Index started the quarter extremely strong extending the exuberance from Q4 2017 generated from the new tax reform. The excitement pushed the Index to new all-time highs in late January before volatility came back into the markets due to some surprising economic news followed by trade war speculation. Market participants decided it was time to take some gains off the table as there was a surprise in employment data for January which propelled interest rates higher, and heightened rhetoric from Washington on new trade tariffs threatening the current projections for global growth. The Federal Reserve did continue with their efforts to normalize rates with a 25 basis point (0.25%) hike in March bringing the target rate to 1.75%, hinting at two more hikes later in 2018, as well as a more aggressive path potentially for 2019. This confluence of events led to an increase in market skepticism and uncertainty around future growth, hindering equities on the whole.
